SATURDAY, JAN. 5, 1907.

With a record of sixty births during the month of December the city of Barre may take courage over its population at the next census.

The sharp shaft of the Rutland minister who declared that the time is just when the church will tolerate the man "who makes money like the devil and spends it like an angel" may in time reach John D. Rockefeller. If it ever does it will find a pretty tough epidermis to penetrate.

We can imagine how fondly Joseph J. Dettell of Middlebury harks back to twelve years ago, when there were only five automobiles in the United States. The Morgan and the other kinds reigned supreme in those days with a little condescension in favor of the bicycle, while they may not be of moment to the entire state, are yet of vital concern to some particular section. How are the legislators to be able to act understandingly if they do not hear both sides of the case through the lobbying influence? In instances of this sort the lobby they did allow to steam horse to snort along within hailing distance of the highway.

The eccentricities of the late Judge Hoyt H. Wheeler of Brattleboro are coming to light even after his death. The fact that his will contained no word of attestation "inasmuch as the fact of his strong personal view of his when he refused to enter a voting booth, under the Australian system, to cast his ballot. Judge Wheeler was not afraid to stand up for his views when occasion demanded either, and now his last will and testament speaks out when he himself is incapable.

The incoming governors of both New Hampshire and Rhode Island declared that lobbying must go. Vermont sent them one better by getting some indirect slaps at the lobbying evil, and she did it by beating down without mercy the opposition which the lobby presented to certain important measures. It must be admitted, however, that a certain amount of lobbying is unavoidable and that furthermore it serves to a good purpose when rightly directed. We do not want our legislators to be entirely shut off from their constituents, enacting laws merely from the dictates of their own understanding of situations. The lawmakers should be kept in touch with the public pulse and the agency of the newspapers to this end needs the reinforcement of an honest lobby. Matters that are not of state-wide importance may come up for action, which, while
